Interesting Wine Fact

Wine's history begins in Asia, not Europe.

In 2016, archeologists discovered the world's oldest winery in Armenia, dating to 4100 BCE. Among the material found in a cave were a drinking bowl and cup, a grape press, and fermentation jars. The grape juice made from Vitis vinifera, was buried underground for winter, allowing it to ferment and produce wine. According to research, the final product was like an unfiltered red wine, and would have tasted like Merlot. This wine from Armenia was also the first known beverage used in religious ceremonies, as the cave was once a burial ground.

Wine Spread Around the World, but was outlawed in Japan

To prevent growing Western influence, the Japanese banned Christianity and wine consumption. It would take three more centuries for the grapevines to reappear in Japan during the Meiji restoration when the nation embraced Western culture. At this point, wine was now present on all the continents except Antarctica.

TAITTINGER The Commitment to a Name

Its origins date back to 1734 when the original house was founded by Jacques Fourneaux. The Taittinger link was established in 1931 when Pierre Taittinger, the founder of today's company acquired the House. History of Winemaking in India

The history of winemaking in India is quite hazy; many people assert that it started about 4,000 years ago. Indian mythology, on the other hand, provide information on wine drinking going well beyond this period. Regardless of your opinion of the legends, it is undeniably true that the Mughal emperors ate Shiraz from Persia.

In the late 1800s, the wine produced in India became quite popular.
